Summary of findings

Overall summary

Redcot Residential Care Home is a care home registered to provide accommodation and personal care for up to 32 people. At the time of our inspection, 20 people were living at the home. Redcot Residential Care Home is a converted residence offering care arranged over three floors.

We found the following examples of good practice:

People were well supported by staff to have telephone and internet contact with their family and friends. The service facilitated in-person visits in a manner which minimised the risk of infection spread, such as garden and window visits. An internal visitor's pod had been created for people to meet. More recently, face to face visits with a designated visitor had been introduced.

The service ensured that all visitors were carefully screened so that they did not present a risk to people in the home. Visitors were asked a series of screening questions, had their temperature checked on arrival and were subject to rapid lateral flow testing. Personal protective equipment (PPE) including face masks and aprons were provided for visitors before entering the home.

Staff had received training on how to keep people safe during the COVID-19 pandemic and staff and people using the service were regularly tested for COVID-19. The building was clean and free from clutter.

Plans were in place to isolate people if required, to minimise the risk of Covid-19 transmission, such as when people returned from a stay in hospital. One to one care and support arrangements were provided to those people required to isolate within their rooms.

Staff carried out additional cleaning of all areas and completed monthly audits of IPC processes. The service had utilised a National Care Forum Compliance Assessment Tool to ensure effective infection prevention processes were in place.

The service had good supplies of PPE which were readily available throughout the service. Staff carried notebooks to support communication with people who struggled to hear them through a mask.

Effective welfare review processes were in place to monitor and support staff. A staff well-being file, located in the staff room, provided additional well-being support and guidance.

Managers spoke positively about the commitment and dedication staff had shown in supporting people's emotional and social wellbeing during the pandemic.
